Happy New Year and, we all hope, a better one. 2024 has been challenging to say the least. A poor harvest, after the awful conditions at sowing time, then the drought in early summer followed by catchy weather to get the crops in.

Despite the above it's a sobering thought when we consider the outrageous events abroad. Unheard of floods, storms and hurricanes and the devastating wild fires in western America. Again a catalogue of extremes taking many lives and leaving thousands without a home. We really should be very satisfied with our little country, and the comfortable lives we mostly enjoy.

Now, for a welcome change, we have just experienced a spell of proper winter weather - the way things used to be years ago. In those days the land was often frozen solid for quite a time, and the benefits to spring cultivations were something now almost forgotten. If we are lucky, and don't get another deluge of heavy rain, the soil will be left in good form for spring.

Brother John had a session skating on a flooded part of our wetlands recently – something we used to do a lot years ago. The fact that he still holds the record for the Lincolnshire Mile, won so long ago, shows how times have changed. There hasn't been suitable ice in the county since.

The sharp spell has finally brought more birds to my feeders. I have been watching the usual tits, finches, robins and dunnocks with plenty of blackbirds, some fieldfares and a pair of beautifully marked mistle thrushes. I was especially pleased to see a green sandpiper feeding in a deep ditch that had remained ice-free. This attractive wading bird, very rare in this area, has a distinctive white back and rump that is so noticeable in flight.

Frosty Fringes

February frosts form fringes on branches.
Ice-cold atmosphere pervades.

The tiniest birds take their chances,
seeking food before the light fades...

Bird-baths are frozen; no splashing delight!
Each day we take time to break up the ice;
help our brave visitors' survival fight.
We'd hate them to pay the ultimate price...

Soon murmuring mowers will echo around;
snowdrops are already covering the ground.

February's watery sun-ray's reflection
appears to acknowledge their simple perfection.

Nature unfolds; spring-time approaches.
Maybe for now we'll stay cosy and warm.
Unpredictable weather reminds us
- there's still time for a storm!

Liftin and Shiftin

When yar look at the wayas the jobs hev changed,
From what it was years agoa,
We're fast becoming a naation of wimps,
Noa will to lay 'ode, like before.

The corn sacks were enormous, and were filled up to the top.
They onny held 12 ston of o-ats, but barley 16 we got.
Of whe-at with 18 sto-ans they were full, and that was enough it would se-am.
But last of all yar'd git 19 sto-ans, when threshing pe-as or Be-ans.

Well two of these sacks were a quaarter,
And that's how we measured the yield.
It was soa many quaarters the aacre,
From any particular field.

Course, all of thease hed to be shifted,
And noa ferk lifts hed we then.
Yar hed to just collar the beggars,
And manage to moave em yersen.

Wi boath hands grabb in the lugs,
And yer kneas stuck into the seam,
Yar could leean back an ton yersen sideways,
Fer to git on the weighin machi-an.

Now that was onny the fost bit,
They'd got to be put on the cart.
There was three different wayas to do it,
Let's look at the barra to start.

A sack barra's not what it sounds like,
Noa wheels that'll tek mo-ast the weight.
It's just a flat board wi two handles, eaach end,
And the sack hes to stand up quite straigh-at.

Two fellas git ode o' the handles,
And ea-ach sticks their he-ad in the sack,
Soa it hodes it upreight as theya lift it,
To be ta-aken on somebody's back.

A hickin stick is the next option,
It's onny a shaft ma-ade of wood.
Two blo-akes pull the sack back ageinst it,
If it balances then that is good.

At last there ca-ame an invention,
A windin barra's what it was called.
Yar could wind the sack up to just the reight height,
Noa matter how short or how tall.

If the ground was hard and level,
Or inside a shed wi a floor,
A runnin barra was best waya to shift em,
Noa sweat then, er shouders soa sore.

Just think of the miller, what he hed to do,
To git the whe-at reight to the top.
Some o the mills hed up to six floors,
He'd to carry the sacks through the lot.

All of the floors hed a trapdoor,
And a ladder that went up to e-ach.
As the miller climbed up the sack pushed its waya through,
Then he kicked the door back wi his fe-at.

Now all theese ode wayas are a thing o the past,
Nearly all the hard werk hes gone.
Why, the young uns todaya theya do-ant knowa they're born,
And mo-ast on em aren't very strong.

The rules, theya ke-ap changing, ivory few years,
Yar should hardly pick owt up at all.
Just fower ston of taates is all that's allowed,
And not eaven that off the floor.

Drams an ounces, pounds an sto-ans, hundred weights, quaarters an tons,
We're all metric now, in measures as well,
How boaring when all sed and done.

I like the ode na-ames,
To loase em's a sha-ame.
A 12 foot ga-ate, now that sounds just reight,
BUT, 3656 mill me-aters.....aren't we in a sta-ate?
